The A Word Forum - The Aword Generated: 20 April, 2024, 16:05

Lyrica (Pregabalin) Posted by helen - 04 Jul 2016 08:22
I have been taking 100mg Lyrica, twice a day for a long time. My muscle cramps have increased to such an extent my ribcage/torso feels permanently crushed, throat and facial/head muscles feel tight too. My neck crunches and cracks loudly frequently!
Bed-bound by constant cramps - does anyone have any thoughts on whether or not increasing Lyrica may decrease my cramps?
Any thoughts helpful as none of traditionally prescribed drugs have not helped (Tizanidine increased cramps)!!
Many thanks and wish everyone 'good days'
Love Helen x
Re: Lyrica (Pregabalin) Posted by kev - 10 Jul 2016 11:44
I'm on 225mg Lyrica daily and have tried cutting down several times but never noticed a worsening of cramps, just stayed the same. However i take Baclofen for cramps and it helps quite a bit Helen.
Re: Lyrica (Pregabalin) Posted by helen - 10 Jul 2016 20:18
Hi Kev, thanks for your reply!
Wish I could tolerate Baclofen, unfortunately had bad dizziness and visual problems so had to stop.

I asked an American pain professor for some advice and she said that I'm "mightily

1/3

Even if we don't get to resolve our problems, still good to keep in touch. Sorry to hear about your tinnitus - must drive you nuts.

My thought processes are affected too, find it hard to remember things and am always checking with my husband if I've got something right or not 9

The A Word Forum - The Aword

Generated: 20 April, 2024, 16:05

I've definitely found MITOQ (from New Zealand) helpful in restoring sensation - it's weird how I didn't realise how much I'd lost until it started coming back - if you know what I mean. Take a look at their website, a couple of people with long term MS have had some amazing results.

Take care, Helen
T	