Hi,

I didn't hear back on my last email so I'm not sure if you got it. I've added it again below if you didn't. I sincerely appreciate your time. -Don

After my son, Randy, was in the motorcycle accident that changed his physical and mental abilities, our family knew our lives were forever changed. What we didn't realize, though, was what a difference we'd see in our finances. It's not just about his ongoing care, which we thought about - it's about how he'll be taken care of after my wife and I are gone.

Thanks to a truly great personal banker, I feel comfortable that we've got a solid financial plan in place now and for the future. However, I know there are a lot of families like mine that have a disabled family member, and many have questions about finances. Having said that, I'm really impressed with your site's wealth of resources for people with disabilities, and if you can find room, I hope you'll add some additional information regarding finances when you or a loved one has a disability.
